"Nell," called Olive Ellison from the machine as her friend came to the door in answer to the doctor's summons, "see on your wraps and come along. I believe we have a clue to the whereabouts of the baby at last. I want to tell you about it."

In a very short time Nell and Olive were seated in the automobile and they were speeding down the road.

"Tell me all about it," Nell exclaimed, leaning forward eagerly.

"About half an hour ago," began Olive, "Mr. Farrer, a farmer who lives about five miles from here, rang the doorbell. He asked if I was Mrs. Ellison and said that he had read of our trouble in the paper, and had at once decided to come and tell us of a strange experience he had had the very day the baby was stolen. He said that he was a mile from the cross roads where he found the buggy."

"Which way were they going?" asked Nell.

"Toward Judson's corners. She got out there and started east."

"How did she account for the fact that she was walking and carrying a heavy baby on a hot day like that?" asked Nell.

"She did not account for it. He could not get her to say anything except that she did not live in these parts."

"How long ago was this Mr. Farrer at your house?" continued Nell.

"Oh, not more than half an hour. Gaylord came about fifteen minutes after he left and you can imagine it did not take long for us to get started on our search."

"Well, there is one thing. If a woman has started out with a heavy baby on foot, she cannot be very far off," comforted Nell.

"That is what I told Olive," the doctor turned toward them as he spoke. "Yes, but it makes the affair all the more mysterious. What woman in her senses would plan to walk to carry a heavy child? Why did not she leave it in the buggy?" There was a worried wrinkle between Olive's eyes as she spoke.

"Oh, she evidently planned on getting rid of it," remarked the doctor. "She knew that a thorough search would be made all over the adjacent roads and that there was no chance of getting away with a buggy. She knew she would be able to get rid of it to help herself along and planned on it."

"Who could do such a thing?" asked Olive sadly. There was no answer from either of her companions.

"I think this is Judson's corners ahead here. You say the man saw her going east from there?" asked the doctor.

"Yes, he looked back as he drove off, and she was walking slowly down the road," replied Olive. The machine turned in the direction indicated.

"How are you going to proceed with the search?" asked Nell.

"I shall comb this district with a fine toothed comb," he announced. "I shall call at every house and question every person I meet. Somebody would surely see her in the course of the afternoon, and she would have to stop for food and shelter by night. It seems to me we stand a very good chance of finding the woman. Whether she had our baby or not remains to be seen." The doctor's tone was cheerful. It was such a relief to have something definite to do to prosecute the search. He had spent the best part of two days in travelling aimlessly about, trying to light on some clue. (To be continued.)

When stock is needed.

Stock is needed in so many recipes that everybody wants to use, and yet stock is often not on hand. But the resourceful cook is never at a loss to make up for this deficiency.

The resourceful cook falls back on compressed beef in the form of past or pellets. This is dissolved in boiling water, and behold, stock of a very good sort is the result. These forms of compressed beef can be kept always on hand, as they do not deteriorate with keeping, and they are very convenient to use.

Moreover, the resourceful cook utilizes all scraps of meat for the making of stock. Suppose there are trimmings from a roast and perhaps bones of a beefsteak on hand. The resourceful cook simmers them slowly in cold water, adding perhaps a little onion or a very small bit of celery or carrot, and perhaps a little bag of herbs. Then she strains the resulting stock, adds some caramel, and stores it away for use when stock is called for.

Caramel gives added flavor and color to stock and is simply burned sugar. So when you have weak stock on hand, improve it with a tablespoonful of caramel.

Stock, a little of it, improves the flavor of tomato sauce sometimes. A delicious sauce is made by simmering tomatoes until soft in stock, then straining and thickening a little.

Many vegetables can be cooked in a little stock to give variety to their flavor. Carrots, peas and beans of all sorts cooked, and then reheated in stock, are delicious.

Splach, too, is good mixed and reheated in rich and well-seasoned stock.

Stock, a cupful of it, added to some sorts of vegetable soup, improves them, or at least gives them an unusual and good flavor.

PINEAPPLE PIE.

Select a fine, fully ripe pineapple, but one that is sound. Cut off the skin with a sharp knife, carefully digging out the "eyes." This done, cut into small dice of uniform size, saving all the juice. Line a deep pie dish with a good puff paste and lay in a layer of the pineapple dice. Do this as soon as the fruit is cut, that the air may not darken it. Allow half a cup of granulated sugar to a cup of the dice, sprinkling each layer with the sugar. Proceed in this way until the dish is full. Pour in juice until it is within a quarter of an inch of the top. Cover with crust, pinching or moulding down the edges; make a gash in the middle with a sharp knife, and bake in a steady oven. Cover with thick white paper until the crust is firm, then brown. Some like to insert a few maraschino cherries in the topmost layer of pineapple. Most gourmands hold that the exquisite flavor of the pineapple cannot be improved.

WINNERS IN THE INTER-CLASS MEET.

The junior class of the Ogden high school won the inter-class athletic tournament staged on the school campus yesterday afternoon, by a margin of 5 1/2 points over the seniors. The complete scores were: Juniors, 54 1/2, seniors 45; sophomores 15 1/2, freshmen 3.

The victory of the juniors was largely due to the class "co-eds," the girl athletes winning first place in the 25-yard dash, the volley ball game and the relay race, opposing the "co-eds" of the other classes.

Bert Brown, a junior and William Hibbs, a senior, were the stars of the day, the former securing 14 points and the latter 13 points. The results of the different events, in detail, follow:

100-yard dash—Hibbs, first; S. Falck, second; O'Keefe, third.

Broad jump—Carnack, first; Griffith, second; G. Dee, third.

220-yard dash—Hibbs, first; S. Falck, second; O'Keefe, third.

High jump—Carhart, 5 feet 3 inches, first; Bagley and Pingree tied for second place.

Half-mile run—Brown, first; Mills, second; Bagley, third.

Shot put—Miller, first; Hibbs, second; Carhart, third.

Boys' relay race—Sculors, first; Juniors, second; Sophomores, third.

All of the place winners were awarded ribbons of white, red and blue, respectively, and the championship banner will be presented to the Junior class at a student body assembly to be held Monday afternoon. There was a fine spirit of class rivalry among the athletes and their adherents at the tournament and this is expected to result in good support for the high school representatives in the state meet to be held before the close of the school term.

A LONG CHASE.

Necessity is the mother of invention, and the hungry Frenchman told about in a biography recently published in England illustrated the old adage anew.

He was in an English restaurant and wanted eggs for breakfast, but had forgotten the English word. So he got around the difficulty in the following way:

"Valterre, vat is dat talking on the yard?"

"A rooster, sir."

"Ah! and vat you call de rooster's wife?"

"The hen, sir."

"And vat you call re childrens of de rooster and his wife?"

"Chickens, sir."

"But vat you call de chicken before they are chicken?"

"Eggs, sir."

"Bring me two."—Christian Family.
